LIVE WORM IN A HORSE'S EYE.

A case of parasitism somewhat rare in this country is attracting attention in Jersey City. About three months ago a driver in the employ of Dodge & Bliss noticed a worm in the eye of one of his horses. It was then about one inch long, and black. Now it is three inches long, and white.

Mr. W. H. Arrowsmith, of the American Veterinary College, tells the Sun:

"The disease is one seldom seen here. It is called in the books filaria oculi, and is very prevalent in warm climates, in India, Australia, and in Arabia. It is supposed to be due to germs taken into the body when the animal is feeding upon grass in low, marshy ground. The germs or eggs of the parasite are developed into the life of a worm, and the worm penetrates to different parts of the body, sometimes to the eye, sometime to the brain, sometimes interior organs. But it has been so seldom seen either in Europe or here that comparatively little is known of its progress, development, or results. There have been, I believe, but four or five cases reported in both Europe and this country. When fully developed, as it is in the eye of the horse of Dodge & Bliss, it is a parasitic white worm, varying from one to three inches in length, and about as thick as an ordinary pin. While in the aqueous humors of the eye it is in continual motion. When I examined it by means of the ophthalmoscope, I found it in the anterior or aqueous chamber of the eye. It was very active. The corner of the eye was somewhat opaque, and the iris somewhat distended. By careful observation we could discern a granular surface upon the anterior face of the crystalline lens. The horse otherwise was in perfect health. Its works, and does not show any apparent inconvenience, with the exception of a certain nervousness during examination of the eye. The activity of the parasite is such at present that it is impossible to say whether it has a head or tail, or what its internal construction may be. But, from microscopic observation, we will probably be able to discover head, tail, and alimentary canal. According to Percival's 'Hippopathology' and 'Williams' Veterinary Surgeon,' even the sex of these parasites is clearly discernable under the microscope. I do not believe that this parasite is ever found in human beings, but only in grass-eating animals that have grazed in low, marshy ground; and that it is in the eye is only a matter of accident in the course of its penetration of the body of the horse."

DEXTROUS TOES AND USELESS FINGERS.

One of the most curious and interesting proof of what human study, ingenuity and perseverance can accomplish, even in the face of natural disadvantages, is shown in the person and accomplishments of Miss Lizzie L. Sturgeon, a native of Carlisle, Pa. The young lady's hands are dependent upon her, but they are now, as they have been from infancy, inactive, and she is dependent upon her feet and toes for services ordinarily manual. Miss Sturgeon embroidered with her feet upon perforated cardboard the motto, "Remember Me." She threaded her needle with as much apparent ease and surety as dexterously as the average modern housewife. She wrote in a very pretty "hand" her name on a card, and held the pen between her toes. The scissors were wielded with equal ease and steadiness. After many interesting expositions of her ability, she turned to an upright piano and played some simple sacred melodies, striking the chords with but one or two false notes and keeping good time. Miss Sturgeon is, in her demeanor and personality, something different from the ordinary museum curiosity. While her affliction naturally creates sympathy in the observer, the feeling quickly gives way to admiration for her self-helpfulness.—Exchange.

THE CONDUCT OF THE CORPSE.

Not long ago a widow stood at the side door of a baggage car watching the stowage of her husband's corpse. As she turned away another lady, also in mourning, appeared with a dog, which was intrusted to the care of the baggage master.

Several times, as the train stopped at stations, the owner of the dog approached the car with solicitious interrogatories about the brute's condition, until the patience of the baggage functionary was about exhausted. At length the widow sidled up to him and asked if her poor dear was all right.

"Yes, confound him!" growled the baggage-master, without looking around. "And another time you ship your poor dear over this road he goes by freight. I don't mind helping a woman, but I won't have no saffron-colored beast of obscure ancestry spewing around the floor of this car and howling for—"

Just then he turned and saw his blunder.

"I beg your pardon, ma'am," he continued, stammering. "I thought yours was the dog. I take it all back, ma'am. The corpse has acted like a perfect gentleman."—Drake's Traveler's Magazine.

AN ELECTRIC ORCHESTRA.

A curious musical entertainment has been arranged at a circus in the Champs Elysees. Instruments, including bells, flutes, cymbals, drums, hautboys of special nature, &c., are placed around the circus and connected by wires with an electric keyboard in the centre. There is also below the circus a machine similarly connected which gives a rumbling sound like that heard in earthquakes. A piece is performed on four trumpets in the centre of the circus, and one of the performers presses now and again on the keyboard, bringing into action the distant instruments as desired. He is also enabled in the same way to produce distant detonations and ignite blue lights.

CINCINNATI'S RICH BEGGAR.

Says a Cincinnati exchange: For years one of the familiar sights of Cincinnati streets has been an aged beggar by the name of Margaret Parker. No doubt of her utter poverty existed, for scores of benevolent persons had visited her squalid room, and found her shivering with cold or eating scraps of loathsome food. One day last week Margaret was told that she must move out of her wretched apartment unless she could pay the rent. That was a manifest impossibility, and a man who had before befriended her hired a wagon, and prepared to help her move. In so doing he dropped a dilapidated trunk, which burst and disclosed two heavy bags of money, amounting, it is supposed, to five thousand or six thousand dollars. The old crone, who stood by, turned pale and exclaimed: "Why, what shall I do? People know I've got money now, and I'll be murdered for it."

Confidence is that feeling by which the mind embarks in great and honorable courses with a sure hope and trust in itself.—Cicero.

More people have read THE SUN during the year just now closing than ever before in its history. It was first published [illegible] No other newspaper published on this side of the earth has been bought and read in any year by so many men and women.
We are credibly informed that people buy, read, and like THE SUN for the following reasons, among others:
Because its news columns present in attractive form and with the greatest possible accuracy whatever has interest for humankind; the events, the incidents and occasions, the wisdom, the philosophy, the notable folly, the solid sense, the humbug, the moving nonsense—all the news of the busiest world at present revolving in space.
Because people have learned that in its remarks concerning persons and affairs THE SUN makes a practice of telling them the exact truth to the best of its ability, three hundred and sixty-five days in the year, before election as well as after, about the whales as well as about the small fish, in the case of dissent as plainly and as fearlessly as when supported by general approval.
